The impudence of this tiny country, the smallest, even as it is the oldest, independent State in the world, was more amusing than terrifying.

This little republic, less than onetenth the area of New York City. and with a population of 11,002, rises out of the very midst of Italy, standing on the east central Adriatic slope, ten and a half airline miles from that smiling sea, across which, when days are clear, may be seen the pink-purplish mountains of Daldred years it has perched up in the the more grim peaks of Monte Tita- red, and the men have an appearno; since the dawning of the Fourth century it has remained aloof in and physically fit. Its total strength dress, customs, money, shimps, is six-just six able-bodied soldiers! weights and measures, indifferent to the whirling world about its feet.

In the year 307 A. D. Marinus, a stonecutter of Arbe, in Dalmatia, fled from the Christian persecutor Diocletian. Following his trade in Italy, he came at last to Rome, and guardedly at first, but soon with tano. There up in the sky he lived his days in the purity of God, calling about him others who had fled the fire and sword, and founding a Why You Should Use Chamberlain's Christian colony.
